

I was really excited when I opened the letter. Having no clue what the letter was about, as soon as I opened it, a piece of paper flew out of my hands. Before I knew it, it was flying in the air. I tried to catch it but I couldn't. "This can't be real", I said to myself. Just then, my mom asked me if any discount coupons had come in the mail. I awkwardly answered, "No, I didn't notice of any." A few minutes later my sister showed me the letter I had lost and asked if it was mine. With relief, I answered "Yes". Then I saw that these were my mom's coupons so I gave them to her. She thanked me and told me to close them again. She winked at me and left the room.
