

I was really excited when I opened the letter. You may wonder what the content was; well, let me tell you.

A few days before, I had been asked by an artist to make a landscape painting. I obviously accepted and started working; I really put a lot of effort in that painting. Sometime later, I decided to show him my artwork. After a long, nervous wait, I heard a voice: "Next competitor, please enter the office", it said. I timidly walked in and sat on a chair near to the artist's desk. "It's about time you revealed your work," he said. I was trembling while trying to hand it in to him. He gave it a stern look, and then grinned. "Good job!" he said. He waved and I waved back. However, I hadn't heard any news until now.

I'm really excited. OK, I got carried away and didn't say what the content was - the artwork was entered for a competition. I really hope to win!

Yiorgos Kalampogias

Congratulations