

I have been studying English since the first class of Primary School. It's a language that was chosen by my parents when I was six years old. I didn't have a choice. The good thing is that I loved it from the very beginning.

English is the most spoken language all over the world, so I can visit whichever country I want. Of course, the first country I would like to visit is England! I've read so many things about England and the way people live there. I am impressed by how well-organised is the daily life of the citizens there and the high standards of their universities. That's probably the main reason why my parents have chosen English as the first language for me to learn! In order to have the option to study abroad in the future.

I hope that very soon I will be able to visit England with my family and, why not, go there for a master's degree as a student.
